

Using thread as my medium, I stitch layers of cloth and images into visual conversations about the mystery of earth and sky. Nature speaks the soul's symbolic language and I discover layers of meaning in each tree and mountain that I quilt.

Biography

Dottie Moore is a studio quilt artist living in Rock Hill, South Carolina. Since 1980 her award-winning works have been exhibited, collected, and published throughout the world, and commissioned by many individuals, corporations, and hospitals.

Dottie has been featured in numerous publications including Threads, American Quilter (front cover in addition to article), Art Quilt Magazine, Quilter's Newsletter, and Traditional Home by Better Homes and Gardens. She is author of the CD book, Lives in Process: Creativity in the Second Fifty Years by Ladybug Press and one of the chapter authors of Midlife Clarity: Epiphanies from Grown-Up Girls by Beyond Words Publishing Company.

She is passionate about the power of the creative process for transforming lives and is founder of "Piecing a Quilt of Life," an international project dedicated to empowering senior women by recognizing their creative abilities. Students and audiences for her classes and lectures include visual artists, musicians, writers, storytellers, women's groups, college students, and quilters.
